Supreme Court, U.S.
FILED
FEB 22 1999
OFFICE OF THE CLERK

(8)

No. 97-1943

IN THE

Supreme Court of the United States

OCTOBER TERM, 1998

KAREN SUTTON and KIMBERLY HINTON,

Petitioners,

v.

UNITED AIR LINES, INC.,

Respondent.

On Writ of Certiorari to the United States Court of Appeals for the Tenth Circuit

BRIEF AMICUS CURIAE OF THE NATIONAL EMPLOYMENT LAWYERS ASSOCIATION IN SUPPORT OF PETITIONERS

PAULA A. BRANTNER
Senior Staff Attorney
NATIONAL EMPLOYMENT LAWYERS ASSOCIATION
600 Harrison Street
Suite 535
San Francisco, CA 94107
(415) 227-4655

GARY PHELAN
Counsel of Record
GARRISON, PHELAN, LEVIN-EPSTEIN, CHIMES & RICHARDSON, P.C.
405 Orange Street
New Haven, CT 06511
(203) 777-4425

Attorneys for Amicus Curiae
NATIONAL EMPLOYMENT LAWYERS ASSOCIATION

Midwest Law Printing Co., Chicago 60610, (312) 321-0220

3088

QUESTION PRESENTED

Should the determination of whether the plaintiffs' visual impairments are a "disability" under the Americans with Disabilities Act, 42 U.S.C. §12102(2)(A), be made without considering their use of mitigating measures of corrective lenses?

TABLE OF CONTENTS

PAGE

QUESTION PRESENTED ..... i

TABLE OF AUTHORITIES ..... iv

INTEREST OF AMICUS CURIAE ..... 1

STATEMENT OF THE CASE ..... 2

SUMMARY OF THE ARGUMENT ..... 4

ARGUMENT ..... 6

I. MITIGATING MEASURES SHOULD NOT BE CONSIDERED WHEN DETERMINING WHETHER AN INDIVIDUAL HAS A DISABILITY UNDER THE FIRST PRONG OF THE ADA'S DEFINITION OF DISABILITY ..... 6

A. Mitigating Measures Were Not Considered Under the Rehabilitation Act ..... 6

B. The ADA's Legislative History Demonstrates that Mitigating Measures Should Not Be Considered When Determining Whether an Individual Has a Disability ..... 10

C. The Equal Employment Opportunity Commission's Interpretive Guidance Clarifies that Mitigating Measures Should Not Be Considered When Determining Whether an Impairment Substantially Limits a Major Life Activity ..... 13

D. Interpreting the First Prong of the Definition of Disability to Exclude Consideration of Mitigating Measures Is Consistent with the Statute's Broad Remedial Purposes ..... 15

II. THE ADA SHOULD NOT BE INTERPRETED TO DISCOURAGE INDIVIDUALS FROM ATTEMPTING TO CONTROL THEIR IMPAIRMENTS ..... 17

III. INDIVIDUALS WITH VISUAL IMPAIRMENTS SHOULD NOT BE EXCLUDED FROM THE ADA'S COVERAGE MERELY BECAUSE THE IMPAIRMENT CAN BE EASILY MITIGATED ..... 20

CONCLUSION ..... 22

TABLE OF AUTHORITIES

Cases: PAGE(S)

Arnold v. United Parcel Service, Inc.,
136 F.3d 854 (1st Cir. 1998) ..... 4, 10, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18

Baert v. Euclid Beverage, Ltd.,
149 F.3d 626 (7th Cir. 1998) ..... 4

Bartlett v. New York State Board of Law Examiners, 156 F.3d 321
(2d Cir. 1998) ..... 4, 18, 19

Bentivegna v. U.S. Dep't of Labor,
694 F.2d 619 (9th Cir. 1982) ..... 9

Bolton v. Scrivner, Inc.,
36 F.3d 939 (10th Cir. 1994), cert. denied,
513 U.S. 1152 (1995) ..... 9

Bragdon v. Abbott,
___ U.S. ___, 118 S.Ct. 2196 (1998) ..... 6, 7, 14

Burlington Industries v. Ellerth,
___ U.S. ___, 118 S.Ct. 2257 (1998) ..... 1

Burroughs v. City of Springfield,
163 F.3d 505 (8th Cir. 1998) ..... 19, 20

Chevron, U.S.A. Inc. v. Natural Resources Defense Council, Inc., 467 U.S. 837 (1984) ... 15

Cleveland v. Policy Management Systems Corp.,
No. 97-1008, cert. granted, ___ U.S. ___,
67 U.S.L.W. 3228 (U.S. Oct. 5, 1998) ..... 1

Cook v. State of Rhode Island Dep't of Mental Health, Retardation and Hospitals,
10 F.3d 17 (1st Cir. 1993) ..... 8

Doane v. City of Omaha,
115 F.3d 624 (8th Cir. 1997), cert. denied,
___ U.S. ___, 118 S.Ct. 693 (1998) ..... 4, 18

Ellison v. Software Spectrum, Inc.,
85 F.3d 187 (5th Cir. 1996) ..... 2

Fallacaro v. Richardson,
964 F.Supp. 87 (D.D.C. 1997) ..... 8, 9, 21

Faragher v. City of Boca Raton,
___ U.S. ___, 118 S.Ct. 2275 (1998) ..... 1

Gilbert v. Frank,
949 F.2d 637 (2d Cir. 1991) ..... 8, 16

Gilday v. Mescosta County,
124 F.3d 760 (6th Cir. 1997) ..... 5

Harris v. H&W Contracting Co.,
102 F.3d 516 (11th Cir. 1996) ..... 4, 15

Kaiser Aluminum & Chemical Corp. v. Bonjorno, 494 U.S. 827 (1990) ..... 10

Kirkenberg v. Albertsons, Inc.,
143 F.3d 1228 (9th Cir. 1998), cert. granted,
___ U.S. ___, No. 98-591, 1999 WL 5332
(U.S. Jan. 8, 1999) ..... 4, 16, 17

Liff v. Secretary of Transportation,
1994 WL 579912 (D.D.C. 1994) ..... 8

Manuel v. Westlake Polymers Corp.,
66 F.3d 748 (5th Cir. 1995) . . . . . 1

Matczak v. Frankford Candy and Chocolate Co.,
136 F.3d 933 (3d Cir. 1997) . . . . . 4, 10, 21

McNemar v. The Disney Store, Inc.,
91 F.3d 610 (3d Cir. 1996), cert. denied,
___ U.S. ___, 117 S.Ct. 958 (1997) . . . . . 1

Miles v. General Services Administration,
1995 WL 766013 (E.D. Pa. 1995) . . . . . 8

Oncale v. Sundowner Offshore Services, Inc.,
___ U.S. ___, 118 S.Ct. 998 (1997) . . . . . 1

Oubre v. Entergy Operations, Inc.,
___ U.S. ___, 118 S.Ct. 1466 (1997) . . . . . 1

Peacock v. County of Marin,
953 F.Supp. 306 (N.D. Cal. 1997) . . . . . 21

Penny v. United Parcel Service, Inc.,
128 F.3d 408 (6th Cir. 1997) . . . . . 15, 16

Reynolds v. Brock,
815 F.2d 571 (9th Cir. 1987) . . . . . 8

School Board of Nassau County v. Arline,
480 U.S. 273 (1987) . . . . . 16

Shattuck v. Kinetic Concepts, Inc.,
49 F.3d 1106 (5th Cir. 1995) . . . . . 1

Sicard v. City of Sioux City,
950 F.Supp. 1520 (N.D. Iowa 1996) . . . . . 21

Siefkin v. Village of Arlington Heights,
65 F.3d 664 (7th Cir. 1995) . . . . . 19, 20

Strathie v. Dep't of Transportation,
716 F.2d 227 (3d Cir. 1983) . . . . . 9

Sutton v. United Air Lines, Ltd.,
130 F.3d 893 (10th Cir. 1997), cert. granted, ___ U.S. ___, No. 97-1943,
1999 WL 5326 (U.S. Jan. 8, 1999) . . . . 3, 4, 5, 20

Washington v. HCA Health Services of Texas, Inc., 152 F.3d 464
(5th Cir. 1998) . . . . . 4, 5, 10, 12, 13

Wilson v. Pennsylvania State Police Dep't,
964 F.Supp. 898 (E.D. Pa. 1997) . . . . . 21

Statutes and Legislative Authorities:

29 U.S.C. §706(8)(B) . . . . . 5, 6

29 U.S.C. §790 . . . . . 6

42 U.S.C. §12102(2) . . . . . 3, 13

42 U.S.C. §12111(8) . . . . . 18

42 U.S.C. §12112(a) . . . . . 17

42 U.S.C. §12112(8) . . . . . 19

42 U.S.C. §12116 . . . . . 14

42 U.S.C. §12182(b)(1) . . . . . 4

42 U.S.C. §12201(a) ..... 8

S. Rep. No. 101-116 (1989) ..... 11, 12

H.R. Rep. No. 101-485 (1990) ..... 11, 12, 21

Federal Regulations:

45 C.F.R. §84.3(j)(2)(i) ..... 7

45 C.F.R. §84.3(j)(2)(ii) ..... 7

28 C.F.R. pt. 35, App. A §35.104 ..... 14

29 C.F.R. pt. 1630, App. §1630.2(g) ..... 9

29 C.F.R. pt. 1630, App. §1630.2(h) ..... 14

29 C.F.R. pt. 1630, App. §1630.2(j) ..... 14, 15

INTEREST OF AMICUS CURIAE

The National Employment Lawyers Association (NELA) is a voluntary membership organization of over 3,000 lawyers who regularly represent employees in labor, employment, and civil rights disputes.[1] NELA is one of the largest organizations in the United States whose members litigate and counsel employees and applicants for employment on claims arising in the workplace. As part of its advocacy efforts, NELA has filed numerous amicus curiae briefs on employment law and civil rights issues. Some recent cases before this Court and other courts are: Faragher v. City of Boca Raton, ___ U.S. ___, 118 S.Ct. 2275 (1998); Burlington Industries v. Ellerth, ___ U.S. ___, 118 S.Ct. 2257 (1998); Oncale v. Sundowner Offshore Services Inc., ___ U.S. ___, 118 S.Ct. 998 (1997); Oubre v. Entergy Operations, Inc., ___ U.S. ___, 118 S.Ct. 1466 (1997); Cleveland v. Policy Management Systems Corp., No. 97-1008 cert. granted, ___ U.S. ___, 67 U.S.L.W. 3228 (U.S. Oct. 5, 1998); McNemar v. The Disney Store, Inc., 91 F.3d 610 (3d Cir. 1996), cert. denied, ___ U.S. ___, 117 S.Ct. 958 (1997); Manuel v. Westlake Polymers Corp., 66 F.3d 748 (5th Cir. 1995); and Shattuck v. Kinetic Concepts, Inc., 49 F.3d 1106 (5th Cir. 1995).

NELA members have brought numerous cases under the Americans with Disabilities Act (ADA). NELA mem-

---

[1] The parties have consented to the filing of this brief; this consent has been filed with the Clerk of the Court. No part of the attached brief has been authored by counsel for either party or any other entity. No persons other than the Amicus Curiae, its members or its counsel, made a monetary contribution to the preparation and submission of this brief.

bers have also represented thousands of individuals in this country who are victims of employment discrimination based on disability status. One of the primary purposes of NELA is to represent, protect and defend the interests of employees involved in workplace disputes, including workers who are involved in ADA litigation.

This case presents an opportunity to clarify that the question of whether an individual has a "disability" should be made without considering the individual's use of mitigating measures such as medications, prosthetic devices and auxiliary aids. NELA submits this brief to urge the Court to conclude that the individual's use of mitigating measures should not be considered when determining whether the person has a substantial limitation of a major life activity.

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

The plaintiffs, Karen and Kimberly Sutton, are twin sisters who currently work as commercial airline pilots for regional commuter airlines. In 1997, they each applied for commercial airline pilot positions with United Air Lines, Inc. During their interviews, the plaintiffs were informed that their uncorrected vision disqualified them from pilot positions with United because it required applicants to have uncorrected vision of 20/100 in each eye. The plaintiffs have uncorrected vision of 20/200 in the right eye and 20/400 in the left eye. With corrective eyewear, the plaintiffs each have vision of 20/20 in both eyes.

The plaintiffs filed suit under the ADA, claiming that United refused to hire them because of their disability of uncorrected vision and/or because United regarded them to be disabled. The plaintiffs claimed that their uncorrected vision was permanent and substantially limited them in the major life activity of seeing.

The district court granted United's motion to dismiss, reasoning that the plaintiffs were not disabled within the meaning of the ADA because their vision did not substantially limit them in the major life activity of seeing. 1996 WL 588917 *3 (D. Colo., Aug. 28, 1996). The district court also rejected the plaintiffs' claim that the defendant regarded them to be disabled, reasoning that the plaintiffs only established that United regarded them as unable to satisfy the requirements for a passenger airline pilot position with one airline.

The Tenth Circuit affirmed the district court's decision granting the defendant's motion to dismiss. In reaching its decision, the Tenth Circuit held that determining whether an individual's impairment substantially limits a major life activity should take into consideration mitigating or corrective measures used by the individual. Sutton v. United Air Lines, Inc., 130 F.3d 893, 902 (10th Cir. 1997), cert. granted, ___ U.S. ___, No. 97-1943, 1999 WL 5326 (U.S. Jan. 8, 1999). The Sutton court also affirmed the district court's decision that the plaintiffs failed to show that United regarded them to be disabled. Id. at 903-06.

SUMMARY OF THE ARGUMENT

The ADA was adopted by Congress in 1990 to "provide a clear and comprehensive national mandate for the elimination of discrimination against individuals with disabilities." 42 U.S.C. §12182(b)(1). Many of those individuals with disabilities often use mitigating measures, such as medications, prosthetic devices or auxiliary aids, to accommodate their disabilities.

The ADA is a remedial statute which must be construed broadly to effectuate its purpose. Some courts have narrowly interpreted the term "disability" by ruling that an individual's use of a mitigating measure should be taken into consideration when determining whether the individual is covered under the ADA. However, eight of the ten circuit courts of appeals that have addressed the question have rejected that position. Compare Bartlett v. New York State Board of Law Examiners, 156 F.3d 321, 329 (2d Cir. 1998); Washington v. HCA Health Services of Texas, Inc., 152 F.3d 464, 470-71 (5th Cir. 1998); Baert v. Euclid Beverage, Ltd., 149 F.3d 626, 629-30 (7th Cir. 1998); Kirkenberg v. Albertson's, Inc., 143 F.3d 1228, 1232-33 (4th Cir. 1998), cert. granted, ___ U.S. ___, No. 98-591, 1999 WL 5332 (U.S. Jan. 8, 1999); Matczak v. Frankford Candy and Chocolate Co., 136 F.3d 933, 937 (3d Cir. 1997); Arnold v. United Parcel Service, Inc., 136 F.3d 854, 857-65 (1st Cir. 1998); Doane v. City of Omaha, 115 F.3d 624, 627-28 (8th Cir. 1997), cert. denied, ___ U.S. ___, 118 S.Ct. 693 (1998); Harris v. H&W Contracting Co., 102 F.3d 516, 520-23 (11th Cir. 1996); with Sutton v. United Air Lines, Inc., 130 F.3d 893, 902 (10th Cir. 1997); cert. granted, ___ U.S. ___, No. 97-1943, 1999 WL 5326 (U.S. Jan. 8, 1999); Gilday v. Mecosta County, 124 F.3d 760, 767, 768 (6th Cir. 1997).[2] Amicus asks this Court to embrace the views of the overwhelming number of courts that have broadly interpreted the statute to exclude consideration of mitigating measures.

The ADA's definition of disability is derived from the definition of "handicapped individual" contained in the Rehabilitation Act of 1973, 29 U.S.C. §706(8)(B). Courts interpreting the definition of "handicapped individual" under the Rehabilitation Act have routinely excluded consideration of mitigating measures. Both ADA's legislative history and the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission's ("EEOC") Interpretive Guidance also state that mitigating measures should not be considered when determining whether an individual is substantially limited in a major life activity and, therefore, covered under the ADA. Interpreting the ADA to exclude consideration of mitigating measures is consistent with the statute's broad remedial purposes.

---

[2] In Ellison v. Software Spectrum, Inc., 85 F.3d 187 (5th Cir. 1996), the Fifth Circuit stated in dicta that an individual's use of mitigating measures should be considered when determining whether the individual is substantially limited in a major life activity. Id. at 191-92 n. 3. However, the Fifth Circuit abandoned that position in Washington v. HCA Health Services of Texas, Inc., 152 F.3d 464, 471 n. 5 (5th Cir. 1998).

ARGUMENT

I. MITIGATING MEASURES SHOULD NOT BE CONSIDERED WHEN DETERMINING WHETHER AN INDIVIDUAL HAS A DISABILITY UNDER THE FIRST PRONG OF THE ADA'S DEFINITION OF DISABILITY.

A. Mitigating Measures Were Not Considered Under the Rehabilitation Act.

The ADA defines the term "disability" as:

(a) a physical or mental impairment that substantially limits one or more of the major life activities of such individual;

(b) a record of such an impairment; or

(c) being regarded as having such an impairment.

42 U.S.C. §12102(2). The ADA's definition of disability is derived "almost verbatim" from the definition of "handicapped individual" contained in the Rehabilitation Act of 1973, 29 U.S.C. §706(8)(B); Bragdon v. Abbott, 118 S.Ct. 2196, 2202 (1998). The ADA provides at 42 U.S.C. §12201(a) that:

> Except as otherwise provided in this chapter, nothing in this chapter shall be construed to apply a lesser standard than the standards used under Title V of the Rehabilitation Act of 1973 (29 U.S.C. §790 et seq.) or the regulations issued by the Federal agencies pursuant to such title.

In Bragdon v. Abbott, 118 S.Ct. 2196 (1998), this Court interpreted that language to "require [ ] us to construe the ADA to grant at least as much protection as provided by the regulations implementing the Rehabilitation Act." Id. at 2202.

The Rehabilitation Act's regulations define "physical or mental impairment" as:

> (A) any physiological disorder or condition, cosmetic disfigurement, or anatomical loss affecting one or more of the following body systems: neurological; musculoskeletal; special sense organs; respiratory, including speech organs; cardiovascular; reproductive; digestive; genitourinary; hemic and lymphatic; skin; and endocrine; or
>
> (B) any mental or psychological disorder, such as mental retardation, organic brain syndrome, emotional or mental illness, and specific learning disabilities.

45 C.F.R. §84.3(j)(2)(i) (1997).

The Rehabilitation Act's regulations contain a representative list of "major life activities" and define the term to include "functions such as caring for one's self, performing manual tasks, walking, seeing, hearing, speaking, breathing, learning and working." 45 C.F.R. §84.3(j)(2)(ii) (1997). The list of major life activities "is illustrative, not exhaustive." Bragdon, 118 S.Ct. at 2205 (concluding that reproduction is a major life activity even though not specifically enumerated in the regulations).

This Court observed in Bragdon that "[w]hen administrative and judicial interpretations have settled the meaning of an existing statutory provision, repetition of the same language in a new statute indicates, as a general matter, the intent to incorporate its administrative and judicial interpretations as well." Id. at 2208 (citations omitted). Courts have never considered the use of mitigating measures when interpreting the definition of "handicapped" under the Rehabilitation Act and its regulations. Therefore, this Court should similarly exclude consideration of the use of mitigating measures when analyzing whether the individual is substantially limited in one or more major life activities.

In Reynolds v. Brock, 815 F.2d 571 (9th Cir. 1987), for example, the Ninth Circuit held that epilepsy was a handicap even though it was controlled by medication. Id. at 574. In Gilbert v. Frank, 949 F.2d 637 (2d Cir. 1991), the Second Circuit stated that "[w]e are inclined to view persons whose kidneys would cease to function without mechanical assistance, or whose kidneys do not function sufficiently to rid their bodies of waste matter without regular dialysis, as being substantially limited in their ability to care for themselves." Id. at 641. The First Circuit concluded in Cook v. State of Rhode Island Dep't of Mental Health, Retardation and Hospitals, 10 F.3d 17 (1st Cir. 1993) that an individual with morbid obesity had a handicap under the Rehabilitation Act, even though she could treat the manifestations of her dysfunctional metabolism through fasting or undereating. Id. at 24.

Although the plaintiff's diabetes, carpel tunnel syndrome and depression were controllable with medication, the court in Miles v. General Services Administration, 1995 WL 766013 (E.D. Pa. 1995) concluded that the plaintiff was handicapped within the meaning of the Rehabilitation Act. The court in Liff v. Secretary of Transportation, 1994 WL 579912 (D.D.C. 1994) rejected the defendant's argument that the plaintiff was not "handicapped" because her depression was controlled by medication, reasoning that "Congress intended that the determination of whether an impairment substantially limits a major life activity is to be made without regard to medication." The court relied, in part, on the language and purpose of the Rehabilitation Act in Fallacaro v. Richardson, 964 F.Supp. 87 (D.D.C. 1997) for its conclusion that a person who was totally blind was handicapped under the statute, even though she had 20/20 vision with corrective lenses.[3]

In Bolton v. Scrivner, Inc., 36 F.3d 939 (10th Cir. 1994), cert. denied, 513 U.S. 1152 (1995), the Tenth Circuit observed that "Congress intended that the relevant case law developed under the Rehabilitation Act be generally be applicable to the term 'disability' under the ADA." Id. at 897 (citing 29 C.F.R. §1630, App. §1630.2(g)). This Court should reject the Tenth Circuit's attempt in the instant case to disregard its own admonition and construe the ADA's definition of disability more narrowly than the Rehabilitation Act's definition of the term of "handicap." Because the Rehabilitation Act's definition of "handicap" did not require that mitigating measures be considered, repeating the same definition of "disability" under the ADA clarified that Congress intended to incorporate that interpretation into the ADA as well.

---

[3] See also, e.g., Strathie v. Dep't of Transportation, 716 F.2d 227, 228-29 (3d Cir. 1983) (undisputed that individual with a hearing impairment was handicapped under the Rehabilitation Act even though with the use of a hearing aid his hearing was corrected to an acceptable level under relevant state law); Bentivegna v. U.S. Dep't of Labor, 694 F.2d 619, 621-22 (9th Cir. 1982) (accepting without discussion that individual with insulin-dependent diabetes was handicapped under the Rehabilitation Act).

B. The ADA's Legislative History Demonstrates that Mitigating Measures Should Not Be Considered When Determining Whether an Individual Has a Disability.

The starting point for interpreting a statute "is the language of the statute itself." Arnold v. United Parcel Service, 136 F.3d 854, 857 (1st Cir. 1998) (citing Kaiser Aluminum & Chemical Corp. v. Bonjorno, 494 U.S. 827, 835 (1990)). Most courts that have examined the question have concluded that the ADA does not clearly state whether mitigating measures should be considered when examining whether an individual has a substantial impairment of one or more major life activities. See, e.g., Washington v. HCA Health Services of Texas, Inc., 152 F.3d 464, 467 (5th Cir. 1998); Arnold v. United Parcel Service, 1367 F.3d 854, 859 (1st Cir. 1998) ("A reasonable person could interpret the plain statutory language to required an evaluation either before or after ameliorative treatment."); Matzczak v. Frankford Candy and Chocolate Co., 136 F.3d 933, 937 (3d Cir. 1997).

If a statute's text is not absolutely clear, the next source for guidance to ascertain the statute's meaning is its legislative history. Arnold, 136 F.3d at 858. The ADA's legislative history plainly demonstrates that mitigating measures should not be considered when determining whether an individual has a substantial impairment of one or more major life activities.

In describing the first prong of the definition of disability, the House Judiciary Committee Report states that:

> The impairment should be assessed without considering whether mitigating measures, such as auxiliary aids or reasonable accommodations, would result in less-than-substantial limitation. For example, a person with epilepsy, an impairment which substantially limits a major life activity, is covered under this test, even if the effects of the impairment are controllable by medication. H.R. Rep. No. 101-485 (III) at 28 (1990), reprinted in 1990 U.S.C.C.A.N. 445, 451 ("House Judiciary Report").

Similarly, the House's Education and Labor Committee Report provides that:

> Whether a person has a disability should be assessed without regard to the availability of mitigating measures, such as reasonable accommodations or auxiliary aids. For example, a person who is hard of hearing is substantially limited in the major life activity of hearing even though the loss may be corrected through the use of a hearing aid. Likewise, persons with impairments, such as epilepsy or diabetes, which substantially limit a major life activity are covered under the first prong of the definition of disability, even if the effects of the impairment are controlled by medication. H.R. Rep. No. 101-485 (II) at 42 (1990), reprinted in 1990 U.S.C.C.A.N. 303, 334 ("House Labor Report").

The Senate Report also provides that determining whether a person has a disability under the ADA "should be assessed without regard to the availability of mitigating measures, such as reasonable accommodations or auxiliary aids." S.Rep. No. 101-116 at 23 (1989) ("Senate Report").

The Senate Report does contain language which some courts have interpreted to be inconsistent with the position that the question of whether a condition is covered under the "first prong" of the definition of disability excludes consideration of mitigating measures.[4] See e.g., Washington v. HCA Health Services of Texas, Inc., 152 F.3d 464, 468 (5th Cir. 1998). While discussing the third prong of the definition of disability, the Senate Report states that:

> Another important goal of the third prong of the definition is to ensure that persons with medical conditions that are under control, and that therefore do not currently limit major life activities, are not discriminated against on the basis of their medical conditions. For example, individuals with controlled diabetes or epilepsy are often denied jobs for which they are qualified. Such denials are the result of negative attitudes and misinformation.

Senate Report at 24.

In Arnold v. United Parcel Service, Inc., 136 F.3d 854 (1st Cir. 1998), the First Circuit concluded that these two passages from the Senate Report were not inconsistent, reasoning that "these passages can be easily squared by recognizing that an individual could have a 'disability' under both prong one (having an impairment that substantially limits a major life activity) and prong three ('regarded as' having such an impairment) at the same time; one does not preclude the other." Id. at 860 (emphasis in original). Moreover, the House Reports, which came after the Senate Reports, did not incorporate the Senate Report's discussion of medicated conditions under the third prong of the disability of definition. That omission led the Fifth Circuit to conclude that:

> Given that much of the structure and language of the House Report was borrowed from the Senate Report, it seems that the House Committees were aware of how the Senate Report dealt with the mitigating measures issue and consciously changed the language of the Reports.

Washington v. HCA Health Services of Texas, Inc., 152 F.3d 464, 468 (5th Cir. 1998).[5]

C. The EEOC's Interpretive Guidance Also States that Mitigating Measures Should Not Be Considered When Determining Whether an Impairment Substantially Limits a Major Life Activity.

If the plain language and legislative history do not clarify the statute's meaning, a court must defer to the interpretation of the agency charged with enforcing the statute, provided the interpretation "flows rationally from a permissible construction of the statute." Arnold v. United Parcel Service, Inc., 136 F.3d 854, 858 (1st Cir. 1998) (citations omitted). The ADA authorized the EEOC to issue regulations to enforce the statute. 42 U.S.C. §12116 (1994). The EEOC exercised that author-

---

[4] The "first prong" of the definition of disability refers to whether the individual has a physical or mental impairment that substantially limits one or more major life activities. 42 U.S.C. §12102(2)(A). The "third prong" of the definition of disability refers to someone who does not have a "disability" under the first prong of the definition but is "regarded" by the employer as having such an impairment. 42 U.S.C. §12102(2)(C).

[5] The Fifth Circuit also observed that ". . . the Senate Bill that was ultimately passed was amended to contain much of the text of the House Bill, indicating that the House's understanding of the ADA controlled the bill that was passed." Washington v. HCA Health Services of Texas, Inc., 152 F.3d 464, 468 (5th Cir. 1998).

ity by promulgating regulations and attaching to those regulations guidelines for interpreting the ADA. Id. at 863. Although the EEOC's interpretive guidelines are not, like regulations, controlling, they "constitute a body of experience and informed judgment to which courts and litigants may properly result for guidance." Bragdon v. Abbott, 118 S.Ct. 2196, 2207 (1998) (citation omitted).[6]

In its Interpretive Guidance, the EEOC states that the existence of an impairment must be determined "without regard to mitigating measures such as medicines, or assistive or prosthetic devices." 29 C.F.R. pt. 1630 App. §1630.2(h). The guidelines later elaborate that the "determination of whether an individual is substantially limited in a major life activity" must be made "without regard to mitigating measures such as medicines or assistive or prosthetic devices." 29 C.F.R. pt. 1630 App. §1630.2(j).[7] The EEOC's Interpretive Guidance also provides that:

> An individual who uses artificial legs would likewise be substantially limited in the major life activity of walking because the individual is unable [6] In Bragdon, this Court looked to the EEOC's pronouncements for guidance in concluding that an individual's asymptomatic HIV disease was a substantial limitation of the major life activity of reproduction. Id. at 2209.

[7] The United States Department of Justice ("DOJ"), which enforces the ADA's prohibition of disability discrimination in employment in state and local government entities, has also stated that "disability should be assessed without regard to the availability of mitigating measures." Arnold v. United Parcel Service, Inc., 136 F.3d 854, 864 (1st Cir. 1998) (quoting 28 C.F.R. Part 35, App. A §35.104).

> to walk without the aid of prosthetic devices. Similarly, a diabetic who without insulin would lapse into a coma would be substantially limited because the individual cannot perform major life activities without the aid of medication.

29 C.F.R. pt.1630, App. §1630.2(j).

This Court has held that an agency's interpretation of a statute it administers "should be given 'considerable weight' and should not be disturbed unless it appears from the statute or legislative history that Congress intended otherwise." Harris v. H&W Contracting Co., 102 F.3d 516, 521 (11th Cir. 1996) (citing Chevron, U.S.A., Inc. v. Natural Resources Defense Council, Inc., 467 U.S. 837, 844-45 (1984). There is no conflict between the EEOC's interpretive guidance and either the statute or its legislative history. See Arnold v. United Parcel Service, Inc., 136 F.3d 854, 864 (1st Cir. 1998); Harris v. H&W Contracting Co., 102 F.3d 516, 521 (11th Cir. 1996). Rather, "[t]he EEOC's interpretation is not merely 'permissible;' it is entirely consistent with the ADA's legislative history and broad remedial purposes." Arnold, 136 F.3d at 864.

D. Interpreting the First Prong of the ADA's Definition of Disability to Exclude Consideration of Mitigating Measures Is Consistent with the Statute's Broad Remedial Purpose.

When construing a statute, a court must "interpret the words of [the statute] in light of the purposes Congress sought to serve." Arnold v. United Parcel Services, Inc., 136 F.3d 854, 861 (1st Cir. 1998) (citations omitted). The ADA is a "broad remedial statute." Penny v. United Parcel Service, Inc., 128 F.3d 408, 414

(6th Cir. 1997). Remedial legislation like the ADA "should be construed broadly to effectuate its purpose." Arnold v. United Parcel Service, Inc., 136 F.3d 854, 861 (1st Cir. 1998); see also Gilbert v. Frank, 949 F.2d 637, 641 (2d Cir. 1991) (observing that the Federal Rehabilitation Act and its regulations should be interpreted broadly).

In the employment discrimination arena, the ADA's fundamental purpose is "to protect individuals who have an underlying medical condition or other limiting impairment, but who are in fact capable of doing the job, with or without the help of medications, prosthetic devices, or other ameliorative measures, and with or without a reasonable accommodation by the employer." Arnold v. United Parcel Service, Inc., 136 F.3d 854, 861 (1st Cir. 1998) (emphasis in original) (citations omitted). In Arnold, the First Circuit concluded that "[c]onceptually, it seems more consistent with Congress' broad remedial goals, and it also makes more sense, to interpret the words 'individual with a disability' more broadly, so the Act's coverage protects more types of people against discrimination." 136 F.3d at 861.[8] The Ninth Circuit reached the same conclusion in Kirkenburg v. Albertson's, Inc., 143 F.3d 1228 (9th Cir. 1998), cert. granted, ___ U.S. ___, No. 98-591, 1999 WL 5332 (1999), reasoning that the ADA "was drafted in broad language in order to protect a large class of physically impaired individuals from unwanted discrimination—it was not drafted narrowly to protect only those with the most severe disabilities." Id. at 1233. Employers are not jeopardized by a broad interpretation of the term "disability" because individuals seeking protection under the statute must still be "qualified" to perform the essential functions of the job. 42 U.S.C. §§12111(8), 12112(a) (1994); see Kirkenburg, 143 F.3d at 1233; Arnold, 136 F.3d at 861-62.

[8] The Arnold court's interpretation mirrors this Court's observation in School Board of Nassau County v. Arline, 480 U.S. 273 (1987) that when interpreting the definition of "handicap" under the Federal Rehabilitation Act "a broad definition, one not limited to the so-called 'traditional handicaps,' is inherent in the statutory definition." Id. at 280 n. 5.

II. THE ADA SHOULD NOT BE INTERPRETED IN A MANNER THAT WOULD DISCOURAGE INDIVIDUALS FROM ATTEMPTING TO CONTROL THEIR IMPAIRMENTS.

In Arnold v. United Parcel Service, 136 F.3d 854 (1st Cir. 1998), the court stated that concluding that Arnold's diabetes was not covered under the prong of the ADA's definition of disability would provide him with a disincentive to controlling his impairment, reasoning that:

> UPS's interpretation could very well produce results antithetical to its expressed concerns and to the Act's attempt to take such concerns into account that a person with a disability is able to use medical knowledge and technology to overcome many of the effects of his illness (in Arnold's case, by a continuing regimen of medicine, proper eating habits and rest) may mean that he will, in practice, rarely require any sort of accommodation from his employer; but his achievement should not leave him subject to discrimination because of his underlying disability. He should not be denied the protections of the ADA because he has independently taken the initiative and successfully brought his diabetes > under control. It is hard to imagine that Congress wished to provide protection to workers who leave it to their employer to accommodate their impairments but deny protection to workers who act independently to overcome their disabilities, thereby creating a disincentive to self help.

Arnold, 136 F.3d at 863 n. 7.

Endorsing the Tenth Circuit's position on mitigating measures would not merely deter individuals from taking advantage of medical knowledge and technology. Rather, it would also deter individuals from developing "self-accommodations" for their impairment. In Doane v. City of Omaha, 115 F.3d 624 (8th Cir. 1997), cert. denied, ___ U.S. ___, 118 S.Ct. 693 (1998), for example, the court held that a police officer, blinded in one eye, was disabled under the first prong of the ADA's definition of disability even though he had developed "subconscious adjustments" which enabled him to compensate for his limitations. Id. at 627. According to the Eighth Circuit, Doane's "brain has mitigated the effects of his impairment, but our analysis of whether he is disabled does not include consideration of mitigating measures. His personal, subconscious adjustments should not take him outside the protective provisions of the ADA." Id. at 627-28. Similarly, the plaintiff in Bartlett v. New York State Board of Law Examiners, 156 F.3d 321 (2d Cir. 1998), had a learning and reading impairment which significantly restricted her ability to timely identify and decipher the written word. Id. at 329. Dr. Bartlett developed "self-accommodations" which improved her ability to spell and her performance on word identity and work attack tests. Id. at 326. The Second Circuit concluded that "[h]er history of self-accommodations, while allowing her to achieve roughly average reading skills (on some measures) when compared to the general population 'do not take [her] outside the protective provisions of the ADA.'" Id. at 329 (quoting Doane).

An individual who elects not to use an available mitigating measure because it would result in exclusion from the ADA's coverage is still placed in a precarious position because they may no longer be a "qualified" individual with a disability, 42 U.S.C. §12112(8), as defined by the ADA. In Siefkin v. Village of Arlington Heights, 65 F.3d 664 (7th Cir. 1995), for example, the defendant hired Siefkin, an individual with diabetes, as a probationary police officer, believing that he "could monitor his medical condition sufficiently to allow him to perform the duties of a police officer." Id. at 666. However, he failed to monitor his diabetes properly on one occasion and suffered a diabetic reaction while on duty driving a patrol car. Id. at 665. The employer terminated him and refused to give him a second chance to show that he could control his diabetes. Id. at 665, 666-67. The Seventh Circuit upheld the district court's dismissal of the case for failure to state a claim, reasoning that the plaintiff was fired because he failed to control a controllable disease. The Eighth Circuit reached the same conclusion in Burroughs v. City of Springfield, 163 F.3d 505 (8th Cir. 1998). Despite Burrough's assurance that he could keep his diabetes under control, he twice suffered a severe diabetic episode due to poor timing of his meals and activities which rendered him unable to perform his job as a police officer. The Eighth Circuit, relying on Siefkin, upheld the District Court's dismissal of his ADA claim, reasoning that it was legitimate for the city to expect and require its patrol officers to be functional and alert at all times while on duty. Id. at 507. As the facts in both Siefkin and Burroughs illustrate, interpreting the ADA in a manner that discourages individuals from controlling their impairments could also jeopardize public safety.

III. INDIVIDUALS WITH VISUAL IMPAIRMENTS SHOULD NOT BE EXCLUDED FROM THE ADA'S COVERAGE MERELY BECAUSE THE IMPAIRMENT CAN BE EASILY MITIGATED.

The courts which have concluded that individuals with corrected vision of 20/20 are not covered under the first prong of the ADA's definition of disability have focused on the relative ease of mitigating a visual impairment. In Sutton v. United Air Lines, 130 F.3d 893 (10th Cir. 1997), cert. granted, No. 97-1992, 1999 WL 5326 (U.S. Jan. 8, 1999), the Tenth Circuit reasoned that "[p]laintiffs merely don their eyeglasses (or contact lenses) and go about all their normal daily activities in the same or similar condition, manner or duration as the average person in the general population." Id. at 903. However, there is nothing in either the ADA's legislative history or the EEOC Regulations and Interpretive Guidance which provides that certain impairments should not be covered under the first prong of the definition of disability, if the mitigating measures for treating the impairment are either easy to use or common. In fact, the House Labor Report specifically identified another relatively common mitigating measure of a hearing aid, stating that "a person who is hard of hearing is substantially limited in the major life activity of hearing, even though the loss may be corrected through the use of a hearing aid." H.R. Rep. No. 101-485(1), at 42 (1990), reprinted in 1990 U.S.C.C.A.N. 334. There is no reason to distinguish between a visual impairment corrected through the use of eyewear and a hearing impairment corrected through the use of a hearing aid. See Wilson v. Pennsylvania State Police Dep't, 964 F.Supp. 898, 906 & n. 9 (E.D. Pa. 1997) (analogizing eyeglasses to hearing aids and observing that "[d]efendants would be hard pressed to argue that eyeglasses and contact lenses are not 'mitigating measures.'")

In an uncorrected state, individuals with visual impairments may be substantially limited in several major life activities. See, e.g., Wilson, 964 F.Supp. at 907 (without corrective eyewear, plaintiff's vision was blurred and unfocused and substantially limited him in several daily activities which involved seeing, such as driving, cooking, reading and caring for his infant son); Peacock v. County of Marin, 953 F.Supp. 306, 309 (N.D. Cal. 1997) (without corrective lenses, plaintiff would be severely limited in seeing, learning, caring for himself, participating in community activities and walking); Sicard v. City of Sioux City, 950 F.Supp. 1420, 1439 (N.D. Iowa 1996) (without corrective lenses, plaintiff could not read, drive an automobile, read street signs, watch television or movies, walk in unfamiliar surroundings or perform any of the duties of the firefighter position he sought). The Tenth Circuit's analysis of the issue ultimately fails because it confuses the impairment with its treatment. See Matczak v. Frankford Candy & Chocolate Co., 136 F.3d 933, 937 (3d Cir. 1997).

In Fallacaro v. Richardson, 965 F.Supp. 87 (D.D.C. 1997), the court rejected the argument that an individual who was legally blind without corrective lenses but had 20/20 vision with contact lenses was not disabled within the meaning of the Rehabilitation Act, reasoning that "[n]either as a matter of law nor common sense would we say that they are not impaired or disabled because their prosthetic device happens to be exceptionally good." Id. at 93. According to the Fallacaro court, "[i]t makes little sense to deprive an entire class of disabled individuals—the legally blind who have correctable vision—of the protections of the Act merely because it is so easy to accommodate their disability." Id.

CONCLUSION

The judgment of the Court of Appeals for the Tenth Circuit should be reversed and the case remanded to the District Court for a full hearing on its merits.

Respectfully submitted,

PAULA A. BRANTNER
Senior Staff Attorney
NATIONAL EMPLOYMENT
LAWYERS ASSOCIATION
600 Harrison Street
Suite 535
San Francisco, CA 94107
(415) 227-4655

GARY PHELAN
Counsel of Record
GARRISON, PHELAN,
LEVIN-EPSTEIN, CHIMES
& RICHARDSON, P.C.
405 Orange Street
New Haven, CT 06511
(203) 777-4425

Attorneys for Amicus Curiae
NATIONAL EMPLOYMENT LAWYERS ASSOCIATION